Information on exercise of the public functions for the year ended 31st March 2018

Steps taken to promote and increase sustainable growth through the exercise of our functions.

- The Drinking Water Quality Regulator for Scotland (DWQR) exists to ensure that drinking water in Scotland is safe to drink. This is done by ensuring that everything Scottish Water does safeguards the quality of the public supply, through a process of inspections and monitoring. DWQR enforces the requirements of The Public Water Supplies (Scotland) Regulations 2014 and takes action where these requirements are not met.
- Additionally, DWQR has a role to ensure drinking water is not only safe, but pleasant to drink and has the trust of consumers. Working with the Scottish Public Services Ombudsman, DWQR assists consumers who have concerns about the quality of their water supply where they feel Scottish Water has not adequately addressed them.
- About 3% of the population receive their drinking water from private water supplies. While these are regulated by local authorities, the DWQR has a duty to oversee this while collecting and interpreting data on these supplies.

Steps taken to improve efficiency, effectiveness and economy in the exercise of our functions.

As the DWQR falls under the Scottish Government, our budget forms part of Scottish Government's central budget allocation, enabling the DWQR to use economies of scale to maximise value for money through;

- Use of the SEAS central finance system for expenditure recording and reporting
- Procuring goods and services using centrally negotiated competitive tender contracts
- Utilising accommodation and IT services located within Scottish Government estate
